COAL STRIKE NOT WORRYING ANYONE IN ADMINISTRATION

PLENTY OF COAL BUT IF PRICE GOES UP THEN—
TO IMPORT COAL
President Has no Power Other Than His Moral Influence.

By DAVID LAWRENCE.
Washington.—The government's attitude toward the coal strike is unique. "Conversations with cabinet officers reflect an equanimity over the situation which is in contrast to the mood of the government on occasions of previous industrial trouble."

Asked whether the government will take a hand in a coal famine results, cabinet members say they expect no famine and would take a hand if the coal supply is exhausted and prices are raised. To this, too, comes the calm answer that of course the administration would not look with favor upon such a course if it were taken by the operators and that it would be most unfortunate if the consumer suffered—but no prediction is made that even on that occasion the government would be justified in intervening.

CALL ATTENTION TO HEADLIGHT STATUTE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Madison Wis.—The industrial commission today in a statement calls attention of motorists to the state headlight law, which requires that all automobiles be equipped with lights that enable the driver to distinguish a person at 200 feet, and at the same time avoid dangerous glare.

Failure to comply with this standard is said to be prima facie evidence of unsafe use of the highways, in case of an accident.

Police officers and not the industrial commission, are charged with enforcement of the headlight law. Milwaukee is said to have equipped a permanent testing station to compel compliance with the law. Other cities are expected to follow their course.

MINE MULES CAPER IN GLEE AS STRIKE PROVIDES VACATION

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—One hundred and fifty-five thousand idle mine workers in the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania are not alone in enjoying the strike holiday. The mine mules, many of which had not seen daylight for years, also are enjoying it. And if the capers they cut are reflections of their feelings they are even more joyous than the miners.

Certainly these humble beasts of burden are not worrying about the length of the suspension for everything has been done for their comfort. Thousands of them were brought from the dark levels in boarded enclosures. To watch them romping about, kicking and biting at one another good naturedly, was evidence enough that they welcomed the change again to get into the sunshine and air free from coal gases. But there was even stronger evidence that the mules disliked their gloomy subterranean existence when an effort was made to lead or drive them toward a mine opening. Invariably there was rebellion.

It is in the deep recesses of the mines, where trolley lines cannot penetrate or where the sparks might cause gas explosions, that the mules

Washington—Government scientists after extensive investigations have found, they declare to be satisfactory substitutes for platinum for various purposes, according to an announcement by the United States Bureau of Mines. The chemical requirements and for use in high-duty electrical contacts, however, the announcement said, NO substitute for platinum has ever been discovered.

One of the most promising substitutes was said by the experts to be what has come to be known as "white gold," which is an alloy of gold and one of the platinum metals. This closely resembles platinum, it was said, and is not attacked by nitric acid.

"White gold" is used extensively in certain classes of jewelry but does not replace platinum in the manufacture of high class jewelry. It was pointed out.

SPRINGTIME ROBBED OF CHARM BY RULES

Kalamazoo—Springtime, the time made for lovers, isn't going to mean so much this year to young women students at Kalamazoo college. That is, if the rigid regulations laid down by Miss Agnes Powell, the college dean, are obeyed. Following are some of Miss Powell's "don'ts":

"Don't keep company with any young man longer than three hours at a time."

"Don't keep company with any young man oftener than two nights a week."

"Don't lean languorously against a wall or other support with a gentleman friend in front of you and braced only by his arm above your shoulder. "Now that spring is coming don't look into the eyes of a gentleman friend with a languid expression." Girls at the college declare the regulations are too strict. The young men refuse to be quoted.

BILLIE BURKE HAD TOO MANY HUBBY 'PHONE CALLS

(By Associated Press.)

Chicago.—The long distance telephone calls of Billie Burke, the actress, to her husband, Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., in New York, made it necessary for Mrs. Burke to obtain a court injunction in order to retain a nine room house in a fashionable north shore residential district during her stay here. The owner of the house tried to dispossess Mrs. Burke, but was restrained through the court order, issued in a special session of court Wednesday night.

Before Mrs. Burke's arrival here, she advertised for a room house for the period March 10 to April 9. Mrs. Frank Townley Brown, who recently formed a widows' protective league, agreed to rent Mrs. Burke her home for $12.50, the money to go to the widows' league.

A few days ago, however, Mrs. Brown asked Mrs. Burke to leave and Wednesday came to take possession of the house. Mrs. Burke then went into court and obtained the injunction.

"I have nothing against Miss Burke personally," said Mrs. Brown, but I found she was telephoning to her husband in New York every night at $15 a call. Those calls will all be on my telephone bill. "Then I understood she has the entire cost of her play living there and I know my house will suffer from so many people. I felt I just couldn't let her stay there any longer, but now I suppose I'll have to."

Plans for the hunt were announced by Chairman Ray Purson at the weekly luncheon at the Grand Hotel Thursday noon. Each of these will be worth a new Harding peace dollar to the finder when present at Kiwanis club's headquarters which will be established at the park.

Palm Sunday Observed by All Nations

Throughout the world of Christendom, even among those who do not profess any religious belief, next Sunday April 9, is known in the calendar of civilization as Palm Sunday. It is the day which marks the beginning of the end of the mission of Christ on earth, and which was to lead, five days later to the tragedy of Golgotha.

There is a real meaning to the day therefore, inasmuch as it has this intimate association, whether one believes in Him or not, with a man whose brief life to a greater degree than any other has profoundly influenced the whole course of the world's history. Riding down into Jerusalem on the humblest of all the beasts of burden, symbolical of the meekness and simplicity of the doctrine which he preached, he throng which had already accepted him, strewed his path with palm branches and cried "Hosannah to the Son of David! Blessed is He that cometh in the Name of the Lord."

With the day and its designation thus established, like many other Christian customs which have taken their place in the secular calendar, it has remained through the ages a fixed, and a recognized event, observed in various ways by Episcopalians, Roman Catholics and other religious bodies according to their doctrinal creeds and forms.

Many quaint and interesting customs have arisen in connection with Palm Sunday. Throughout the history of the world the palm has been used by all nations as the emblem of joy and of triumph over foes, its specific use by Christians in this connection is in token of victory over the flesh and world. So it was that when the four evangelists met in Jerusalem to write their gospels, it was with this emblem of triumph that he was joyfully greeted.

The formal observance of Palm Sunday by processions and other celebrations has been traced by historians back to the sixth century. The Greeks observed it with great solemnity as did the other churches in the East. With the spread of Christianity to the West, some of the more rigid forms of the observance gave way, particularly in the

PLAN NO CHANGE IN TEACHERS' PAY

Practicing Economy, Board Decides Against Any Increases.

Hopes of city school teachers for an increase of salary for the fall term were shattered at a special meeting of the board of education, held Wednesday night, on call of President Jesse Davis, when the report of the teachers' committee was sanctioned. Teachers will be paid at their present salaries, or their successors hired at that amount, it was decided.

Following the action of the city council in observing the rigid economy in the city departments, it was felt by the school board that no increases should be granted at this time. Janesville, as the salaries now stand, ranks among the poorest of the state in the matter of teachers' salaries.

The teachers' committee, Mrs. Fred Sutherland, chairman, is now working out a list of the salaries, which will probably be adopted at the April meeting of the board next Monday night.

Latin countries, to a more joyous ceremony and the day took on the nature of a floral festival second only to Easter itself. Thus, among the Spanish it was the Fiesta of Palm Sunday, and Spanish explorers arriving on Palm Sunday, 1512, discovered what is now the State of Florida, that name was given to the land in honor of the festival of Pasqua, Florida which was being celebrated that day.

The medieval chronicles abound in quaint references to the observance of the day among the Armenians, Lithuanians, Serbs and Croats as well as in England and in Germany. In England the day was called Olive or Branch Sunday; in the United States it was known as Palm Sunday, and in the long procession, symbolic of the entry into Jerusalem in which the participants carried palm and olive branches and at the head of which walked a child, a child was carried from wood. Thus the observance of the day as, read throughout the world and it came about that the world's history, riding down into Jerusalem on the humblest of all the beasts of burden, symbolical of the meekness and simplicity of the doctrine which he preached, he throng which had already accepted him, strewed his path with palm branches and cried "Hosannah to the Son of David! Blessed is He that cometh in the Name of the Lord."

According to an ancient chronicle, the faithful in Jerusalem went out to meet Jesus on Palm Sunday, "after all the customary exercises from cock crow till noon had taken place in the Anastasia and at the Cross, to go the greater church, the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, the Martyrium. Here the ordinary services were held. At the seventh hour, (1 p. m.), all proceeded to the Mount of Olives and to the cave in which the Lord used to teach, and for two hours, hymns, anthems and lessons were recited. About the hour of None (3 p. m.) all went hence to the Mount of Olives, to the Garden of Gethsemane, where Jesus met the Lord, saying, "Blessed is He that cometh in the Name of the Lord" was read," following which the psalm, "Hosannah, Hosannah, Hosannah to the son of David."

In some places in France and Germany it is customary for Palm Sunday to strew flowers and green boughs about the crosses in the churchyards. On the lower Rhine graves are decorated with palms which have been blessed. Palm branches are used in processions were later taken home by the faithful and used for devotional purposes. In some of the Eastern countries they were preserved in houses and barns and thrown on the first during violent storms. In many places it was from the blessed palm that ashes were procured for Ash Wednesday.

TIME TO FOLLOW ON THE HEELS OF NATURE.

Spring is with us and busy every day redressing a world awakening from a blanket sleep. She is adorning herself with new garments but with the clothes she is putting on comes also revelation of unsightly things buried by winter snows. It would seem that we should be just as anxious and earnest in putting on new decorations as is Nature. This is the time to clean up about the home, on the streets and in the alleys. "Clean up week" has been set to begin April 17 and when the Saturday night following comes, Janesville ought to give Miss Spring the surprise of her young life in cleanliness and adornment of an orderly and ready-for-inspection city.

There will be the usual arrangements and regulations about the city wagons taking away the accumulations of dirt and rubbish and it's up to the home owner or renter to gather the stuff together.

It is a good time also to make preparations this year for a better and more pleasing flower garden. Janesville with her many homes might be the Flower City as well as the Rover City. Mark a big spot on the calendar for April 17.

JUST WHERE THE OPERATORS FAILED.

A correspondent of the Gazette writes to say that there is evidently a misunderstanding of the attitude of the coal operators toward the miners and that there was no obligation on the part of the operators to meet with the miners for discussion of the new contract for 1922. It was stated in the Gazette in an editorial review of the coal situation that the operators refused to hold such a meeting and that the question of wages while a factor, perhaps the chief one in the strike ultimately, had not been discussed. But the correspondent is wrong and the Gazette is right, if a contract is capable of any interpretation, or is something beside a scrap of paper. It was written in the final contract between miners and operators following the appointment of the Bituminous Coal Commission by President Wilson in 1919, for the investigation of wages. It will be remembered that this commission ordered an increase of 27 per cent in wages and it was accepted by both operators and miners. While the commission had no authority to exact the completion of that contract and was not a signatory party to it, yet the document was clear in its agreement to hold a meeting prior to April 1, 1922 to arrive at a new understanding.

When President Lewis called a conference on this distinct agreement the operators refused to meet and discuss these questions. After the Ohio and Pennsylvania operators refused those of Illinois and fields outside the central district followed suit. There were two things to do, either abandon the principle of collective bargaining or strike.

That is exactly why we have a strike. There is no secret about it that the operators in the central field have entered their refusal for the purpose of breaking up the miners union and have repudiated the contract which they signed. No matter how much opposed to unions one may be the action of the operators will not have much of an appeal to the persons believing in the inviolability and integrity of contracts. The miners have the legal and moral side of the question and it may be said it is the operator crowd that is striking and not the laborers. The question of wages has not been presented at all, though the public seems to have a mistaken opinion that it is a wage question involved in the strike.

Striking the bottom of the coal bin is the most serious thing in the coal situation.

There is great satisfaction in the election of Burr W. Jones to the supreme bench. It may be remembered that in North Dakota it was impossible to put over the program of state socialism until the supreme court was changed to a complaisant and responsive body. One of the barriers to such a condition here in Wisconsin will be the Hon. Burr Jones, who is a lawyer and a judge and not a politician. While the latter returns from Milwaukee county show that Kleist has carried the election there it is gratifying that in general Justice Jones leads in almost every county and will sit on the bench for another term.

About the only person interested in the Arbuckle trial these is Fatty Arbuckle.

A New Home for the Ballet

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Washington.—Is American ballet to be the next development in the art of the dance? Paul Tcherekoff, former dancer with Pavlova and now ballet master of the Washington Opera company, says the most promising progress in the art of ballet is being made in this country.

France, Italy and Russia have had their turns as being the center of the dancing stage. Mr. Tcherekoff points out. It was in France the ballet was fixed into its conventional form almost four centuries ago, when Louis XIV was patron of the dance. For some years this king and the more supple members of his court took part in elaborate ballets presented at Versailles, and finally this dancing monarch established a Royal Academy of the Dance.

It was not until a few decades ago that the art was much changed. This time Russia was the innovator. Russian dancers took the conventional technique of the French ballet for a basis and began to do radical and beautiful things. They went out of the Russian schools and astonished their audiences with great variety in what was supposed to be a restricted form of the dance.

The Russian influence has been so strong that we have almost forgotten that a billowy tarlatan skirt was once the stock costume of a ballerina. Almost any kind of dance—Indian, Greek, oriental, Gypsy, pastoral—is material for the modern ballet dancer.

The traditions of the ballet are not lost, however. There is a difference, for example, between the Greek dance, which is an inspirational dancer might create, and the Greek dance of a ballerina. She handles her interpretation on a foundation of technique—positions of feet and hands which have been found beautiful. The rhythmic, or nature dance finds such a foundation hampering to the freedom of the dance. Her work is less restrained, but ballet devotees hold it is apt to be less artistic, since the dancer's emotions and ecstasy may not always lead her to take the most pleasing poses.

Russia broadened the horizon of the ballet. But now it almost seems as if Russia, as a country, is beginning to peter out in its dance offerings. Well known Russian dancers are scattered. Here are told that Tcherekoff is conducting a ballet in Moscow under the protection of the government there, but little is heard of his work. Nijinsky is an uncertain quantity. One report has it he is dead, while another says he is conducting a ballet school in Switzerland.

Other members of the Russian ballet are in this country dancing, producing and teaching. Still others are working abroad in cubist like productions which are attracting attention as a novelty. Straight lines are a feature of these ballets. Stiffness of costume is achieved by such devices as padding the shoulders with wood.

The cost is heightened by geometric riots of color for costumes and settings. Music is of the futuristic type—at its best reminiscent of Debussy, a trifle off key; at its worst a capable imitation of the baby maltréating the old family piano. Mr. Tcherekoff believes it is a step to the side rather than an advance.

"America now has a chance to be the center of the stage, so far as ballet is concerned," Mr. Tcherekoff explains. "That so many of the Russians are in this country working in different cities proves that the American people are interested in the art."

Whether America can add something to the ballet as Russia did, remains to be seen. It is not easy to evolve anything racially characteristic out of modern America because of the melting pot atmosphere. There are possibilities in the Indian dancing, however, and negro forms are an almost untouched field. The cake walk and shuffling steps and mannerisms of the negro dances, adapted for ballet with suitable music and settings, would be interesting.

"Few people would think of a newspaper cartoonist as the germ of a ballet," says Adolph Bolm, who is doing a ballet with specially written music, based on the newspaper comic sheet character Krazy Kat.

But whether America adds any of its personality to the ballet or not, most of the important ballet work of the near future will be done here, Mr. Tcherekoff believes.

Ballet is popular, and yet, strangely enough, people know very little of its history or technique. There is a great deal of misunderstanding in this country regarding it. Mr. Tcherekoff finds.

"For instance," he says, "there is a popular belief that a dancer must begin studying as a small child in such a thing as over training. Both the muscular back, arm and leg, and the normal appearing body are seen on the stage today. The dancer of great muscle may be a good technician, but not necessarily so."

Such fallacies about the ballet have become deeply rooted. Mr. Tcherekoff says, because so little has been seen of the art in this country. But now, with the development of community opera and with ballet schools springing up over the country, we have the prospect of ballet as a popular American art.

It may be predicted that the coal strike will last only so long as the public acts as the innocent and silent bystander.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

ENVY
Lord, I am sick with envy! Not of those Whose sum of gold is greater far than mine,
Nor those who stand where pomp and glory shine.
But when I see another man disclose
The traits of money to his fellow men,
Or stand alone upon Truth's battle line
And spurn the wrong which selfishness endorses,
I covetously yearn to be as fine.
If it be sin to envy, damned am I.
For day by day I envy better men
But of course that's true by a lie.
In faith and strength I would be born again,
No good man ever passes by my gate
But what I wish that I could be as great.

A LITTLE SPICE OF LIFE.
You've heard of permanent waves.
This is about permanent rolls.
A sign in the Broadway reads:
"GIRLS, WE PUT Permanent Rolls
In Your Stockings."
In the old days it was
Not necessary to advertise and Tell the girls how to keep
Permanent rolls in their stockings.
When they put rolls in their
The rolls remained there—
The girls changed them by a lie.
Before everything was so high
And girls had to spend so much,
They didn't have to unwrap
The old roll every time they Wanted anything, but made
The rolls change by a lie.
There is no such thing as
A permanent roll these days.
And it is mighty hard to get
Hold of even a temporary one.

GETTING STATISTICS ON HUR.

Henry J. Knorr, an engineer, filed suit for divorce from Esther M. Knorr.

The bill bristles with statistics of Mrs. Knorr's alleged marital misdeeds. Here are a few of the recollections as set forth by the husband in his bill:

Sixty-five nights away from home between Jan. 1, 1920, and Jan. 1, 1921.

Twenty-eight nights in the same period she was away from home between Jan. 1, 1921, and Jan. 1, 1922.

One hundred and forty-nine times she forgot to get breakfast.

Eighty-four times she failed to prepare the evening meal.

Twenty-five times she threatened to stab him, or fill him full of lead.

Furthermore, the husband alleges, the wife is an inveterate cigar smoker, buying and smoking "dream smokes" by the hundred.

Knorr says he asked his wife for an explanation of her conduct and was told it was none of his business.

When John was a boy on the farm he watered the stock and when he became a Wall street financier he did the same.

Who's Who Today

JOHN F. HYLAN.

Political observations in a recent speech delivered by John F. Hyman of New York for a bid for the Democratic nomination for the presidential race in 1924. In the speech, delivered in Chicago, Hyman stated his "views on the four great issues of the day, the tariff, the tariff and other national issues."

Hyman has been mayor of New York since January, 1921. He took office in the re-election year after occurred after one of the bitterest majority fights in the history of the metropolis.

The mayor was born on a farm at New York, fifty-four years ago. He lost his parents at an early age. He was educated in the public schools and at the New York law school. He began the practice of law in Brooklyn in 1897. He was not until 1903 that he sought political action.

That year he ran for municipal judge. He became city magistrate in 1906 and held the position until 1911 when he was appointed judge of the county court. He was elected to that office in the following year.

LOOKING BACKWARD

Forty Years Ago
April 6, 1882.—A long and tedious meeting of the common council was held last night. The resignation of Ald. Hawes was accepted, and many bills O. K'd.—The Forbes Dramatic company will play "The Star of the East" at the Knickerbocker, formerly connected with the county jail, will soon leave for Waupun, where he will accept a responsible position.

Thirty Years Ago
April 6, 1892.—An Elgin firm has purchased 100 acres on the Mole tract on the river and plans to plant it and sell it for homes. It will mean a big boom for the city if carried out. A ninety-day option has been secured.—Republicans carried the city vote yesterday. Oscar D. Rowe was elected mayor and a republican council will back him.

Twenty Years Ago
April 6, 1902.—The cutters for the Marzuff Shoe company will start work next Monday. The plant has recently been rebuilt after having burned down last year. A large force of men will be kept at work all the time.

Ten Years Ago

WHAT ARE PIMPLES?
Shakespeare gave free reign to his unbridled imagination when he adorned one of his characters with the rose of youth and equipped the reluctant schoolboy with a shining morning face. It isn't quite normal for a boy or girl to produce no crop of pimples in the teens.

The ordinary crop of pimples appearing about the forehead, chin, cheeks, and sometimes on the chest and back, along with a more or less excessive excretion of oil by the skin and visible comedones (blackheads or whiteheads), in the plumping time of youth, may be looked upon as a rather wholesome sign. There are several advantages in such a crop, and so-called skin drawbacks save the painful blow to the youngster's vanity or pride. For one thing, a crop of pimples affords Mrs. Gamp a grand opportunity to whisper Mrs. Harris's opinions about her own complexion, and to take a walk up at the normal character of the child in an insinuating way.

The direct cause of a pimple is of course the same as the cause of a boil or an abscess or a carbuncle, invasion of the skin tissue by one of the several strains of cocci which are more or less constantly present on the surface of our skins and which have the faculty of inducing suppuration (pus formation). In some instances of obstinate cutaneous eruptions, such as the so-called "pimples of a pimples," much benefit may be derived from a course of treatment with bacteria (bacterial "vaccines") as they are known in the medical world. The bacteria present in the individual case. The bacterial origin of pimples should be borne in mind by the victim, whose own fingers so frequently serve as the medium of introducing the bacteria into the skin.

The rule of asepsis applies here, as in the case of boils, carbuncles, or any other skin eruption. The rule is simple. If you break this rule, then your own comfort and safety, as well as that of others, hinges on the promptness and the thoroughness with which you wash your hands with soap and water after the breach.

In youth the sebaceous glands of the skin, which elaborate the oil which keeps the skin soft, smooth, warm and clear, are not only working at top pace with the extraordinary rapid increase in square surface at this period of our growth. Often, in fact almost physiologically, this development of the sebaceous glands outstrips the general growth to a degree the epithelial cells lining the gland ducts multiply too fast, resulting in more or less obstruction, retention of sebum, whiteheads, and, if the material becomes discolored with dust or grime, blackheads.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
Line in the Drinking Water.
I keep a vessel of water on the dining room radiator and I notice when it is allowed to evaporate completely that a white scum, resembling slaked lime, can you tell me what this is? As I have had for years what the "old ladies" call "limescale," and wondering whether this condition of the city water has anything to do with it. (Mrs. M. S. S.)
Answer.—It is chiefly lime. It is of no significance so far as the wholesomeness of the water is concerned. The lime is concerned. Drink all you can of the city water—it will tend to oppose acidity.

Broken Feed.
Is it safe for me to feed my chickens table scrap and other garbage from a household where a member is suffering with tuberculosis? The garbage comes from remains of meals left on the table, etc. (Mrs. G. M. S.)
Answer.—If you are under the precaution of washing your hands immediately after handling the garbage, and if the human tuberculosis can be transferred to fowls, I do not know, though fowls have a type of tuberculosis.

Orange Catnip.
I have a habit of eating an orange after my evening meal—not every night, but once in a while. I have noticed in the basket on the table, is this harmful? (Mrs. S.)
Answer.—No. I suppose I might mention the fact that the orange, the citric acid and all that sort of thing, but enough to say it is a wholesome habit to eat oranges every day or several, at whatever time you like.

Q. In what section of the United States is sulphur produced?
A. Sulphur is produced in Louisiana and Texas.

Q. What was the nature of the Morcy letter which created such a furor in the Garfield campaign?
A. In the Garfield campaign the presidential campaign of 1880 a letter which favored Chinese immigration purporting to have been written by General Garfield to H. L. Morcy of New York, was made public and used as a campaign document by the democrats. General Garfield denounced the letter as a forgery.

Q. How long do turtles live?
A. There is a giant tortoise in the New York Zoo whose age is computed to be 300 years. It has attained a weight of 300 pounds.

Q. Does hot water freeze quicker than cold water?
A. Chemically, pure water freezes more quickly than water that contains impurities. Water that has been boiled and cooled will freeze more quickly than water that has not been.

Q. What does La Traviata mean and why is the title used for the opera of that name?
A. "La Traviata" means "the wanderer." It is the "last one." Any woman who lives the kind of a life lived by the "Lady of the Camellias" is socially a castaway, or a wanderer.

Q. When did we first have government inspection of cut mines?
A. The first coal mine inspection law was enacted by the state of Pennsylvania in 1837.

HOROSCOPE

"The stars incline, but do not compel."
THURSDAY, APRIL 6, 1922
Mercury and Saturn rule strongly for good today, according to astrology. In this column, the stars are given for all sorts of real estate transactions.

Land advertisements have the best possible direction of the stars, making for quick returns.

Many cooperative enterprises in home-building are to be successful. New York and California will work out original and profitable schemes, this year.

It is recalled that the lunation for this month is most unfavorable for shipping affairs. There will be no need of our navy at an early date, astrologers prophesy, however.

Royal interests are a benefit next month, when there will be great increase in traffic. It is prognosticated. Illness among royal personages will be reported as the spring advances, and one who wears a queen's crown will pass away.

This planetary government is not favorable for farmers, who will meet many problems in the coming summer. Legislation will prove unsatisfactory.

Foreign relations will disturb Great Britain and there will be a period of upheaval in government affairs.

Lloyd George, the prime minister of England, is now under the influence of the Sun to a parallel to Saturn and later to an opposition to Saturn, and this is read as forecasting trouble for him and the government.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the luxury of a very active business. Children born on this day are likely to be clever and industrious, steady and reliable.

By ELSIE ROBINSON.

Miss Elsie Hill married Mr. Albert Levidit the other day—but she still Miss Elsie Hill. "No," says she, "I didn't take his name. Why should I? There's no law to compel me and no more reason for my taking his name than for his taking mine."

So she signs Miss Hill while society gnashes its teeth, chews its nails and goes through other signs of extreme fretfulness. "Immoral! Disgraceful! Outrageous! Unwomanly!" they yell. Yet why? To a large extent, a very large extent, Miss or Mrs. Elsie is perfectly right. There is no law to compel her to take her husband's name. Neither is there any better argument for a wife taking her husband's name than for a husband taking a wife's. But there is a mighty

Customers First

The old idea of a merchant was a man who SOLD something—a sort of bulldog of barter who defied anyone who stepped within his portals to escape without buying something, whether it was what the visitor wanted or not; one who viewed, all his transactions as a series of struggles of wits and wits.

That sort of selling has a quaint sound to modern ears—although in certain doubtful circles of business, it still may exist. It would be a suicidal policy in any permanent, reputable business—and most inevitably in an established retail institution. The merchant of today makes customers first—after that he doesn't have to "make" sales.

Now the man or woman who fights actual evil, and who sacrifices comfort, health, and even life, to achieve his ends, is a hero. But the man or woman who merely fights a universal convenience, in order to be put on record as a fighter, is a selfish, silly egoist and does it for a limited reformer will resent his action.

Miss Hill feels that she has made a splendid gesture for women by refusing to bear her husband's name. She has instead merely stuck out her tongue at society and added to the confusion of a world where the balance of action which the feminine sex has borne so long and to its sorrow.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE. George Morton, a rich man, when his father loses all his property—a heavy business loss—George becomes a pauper and as a part of the job acts as a groom to Sylvia Platter who she rides. Sylvia, thrown from her horse and thinking her unconscious, George kisses her, calling out that he loves her. She drives him from the place and George catches her in the air, who goes to horsewhip him, but in a fair fight, he seeks an education, goes to Princeton, meets Betty, a tutor, and aids his college to win from Harvard. He makes many acquaintances, and one of them is Sylvia Platter, who shall marry him and meet her several times, each time seemingly more and more the brother becomes. But he continues in the determination. Betty Allison is very kind to George, and she is a high school position. But Sylvia still flouts him, showing preference for a classmate who goes to a second grade. Dairymple, George goes to training camp and says farewell to Sylvia before sailing to fight. Even as Dairymple, an enemy of George, seems to be the favorite with Sylvia. George returns from war after saving a hero's life, but is desperately wounded. He fights the restlessness and anarchy apparent following the war, but makes no headway with Sylvia.

To Be Continued.

Dinner Stories

(Continued from Yesterday.) Of her words and actions immediately afterward he didn't pretend to understand anything beyond their assurance that Dairymple's romance was at an end. Not a doubt crop into his mind as to the nature of the situation. He was surprised to find himself at his destination. When he reached his apartment he got out the old photograph and the broken riding crop, and with them in his hand he went to the fire, dreaming of the long road over which they had consistently aided him. He compared Sylvia as he had just seen her with the girl and intolerant Sylvia of the photograph, and he could not help but think of the curved lips moving to form the words: "You'll not forget."

He lowered his hands, and took a deep breath like one who has completed a journey. Pondering in a sense, he had reached the heights most carefully guarded of all.

XVIII

He heard the ringing of the door bell. His servant slipped in.

"Mr. Lambert Platter, sir," said George, "I have placed the crop and the photograph in a drawer, and looked at the man with an air of surprise."

"Of course, I should like to see him. And bring me something on a tray, here in front of the fire."

Lambert walked in.

"Don't mind my coming this way, George?"

"I'm glad I'm no longer 'Morton'." George said, dryly. "Sit down. I'm going to have a bite to eat."

He glanced at his watch.

"Good Lord! It's after 10 o'clock."

"Yes," said Lambert, "I don't know, there was a lot to talk about."

Little of the trouble had left Lambert's face, but George fancied Sylvia's brother looked at him with curiosity, with a form of respect.

"I'm glad you've come," George said, "but I don't intend to apologize for what I did this evening. I think we all, no matter what our inheritance, fight without thought of affection for our happiness. That's what I did. I love your sister, Lambert. Never dreamed how much until tonight. Not a great deal to say, but it's enormous beyond definition to think you have Betty, so perhaps you can understand."

Lambert smiled in a superior fashion.

"I'm a little confused," he said. "She's led me to believe all along she's disinterested. Has kept you away from Oakmont; has made it difficult from the start. Then I find her, whether willingly or not—at least not crying out for help—in your arms."

"I had to open her eyes to what she had done," George answered. "I wasn't exactly accountable, but I honestly believe I took the only possible means. I don't know whether I succeeded."

BEAUTY CHATS by Edna Kent Forbes

Rosewater is an important ingredient in the making of perfumes, extracts and cold creams. Real rosewater possesses great cosmetic virtue and is most delightful to use, but there is an enormous difference between real rosewater and the so-called rosewater that most shops sell.

Rosewater is not difficult to make. You would find it an easy and delightful task during the winter when the roses are at their fullest bloom. There are two formulas. One calls for four pounds of petals to 10 quarts of water; the other formula 10 pounds to eight quarts. The petals are gathered, washed in an earthen jar, sprinkled with salt and kept covered; every day fresh petals are added until the amount is sufficient.

The petals are then added to the water and the entire quantity put over the heat to boil. An enamel kettle or pan is best as the water must not come in contact with any metal, (but tin). A convenient way of making this is to boil a small quantity of water in a tin or enameled tea kettle. A piece of rubber tubing is fastened over the spout of the kettle; this should be passed through a pall of cold water so as to condense the steam. The distillate which runs from the tube should fall into a glass or earthenware receptacle and the first ounce should be rejected.

The distillate or rosewater should be loosely wicked and kept in a cool dark place for several weeks. By this time it will lose its rawness and develop its full odour. It can then be decanted into small bottles.

Betty—Since your hair has become thin, adding to its color, it shows that the vitality is lowered. Instead of coloring by means of dye, try to restore it by building up the health of the scalp by means of massage and gentle hair oil. If the general health is depleted the hair will always show it, so build up your health with that of the scalp.

June—Cocoa butter can be purchased at any drug store. Heat the cocoa slightly and rub it into the palm of the hand before massaging any part of the body that you wish to treat. Never use it on the face or throat, as it may encourage the growth of fine hair.

Slim—A case of pimples, which is so bad as to cover the face and neck, could not be cleared up quickly. You probably are in need of a doctor who will treat this condition after finding out the cause for it.

"Tinker Bob" Stories by Carlyle H. Holcomb

WHO HAS SO MANY STRIPES? Tinker and Bob and Silky and little Tim. Elephant, were having a delightful time in the Jungle Land. The great River Horses went back to the island and little Tim took the King and his companion on through the thick cane undergrowth to the plain and the valley.

It was so interesting to the King that he had almost forgotten about his promise to take Tim safely back to his mother and father. But Tim was having a lot of fun himself. No sooner had they come out of the dense thicket than Tinker saw something dart behind a clump of small trees only a short distance ahead.

"What was that Tim?" cried Tinker. "I have never seen anything that looked so beautiful since I left the great forest of my home-land."

"Oh, I don't know what it was, maybe a bird. Did it have feathers?"

"No, no, there were no feathers on it," said Tim. "It was a beautiful creature."

"Urumpf! Urumpf!" cried Tim. "Then it must have been a snake. I don't think of anything else that is beautiful in the Jungles."

"Don't you suppose I know what a snake is? I have seen a great many of them. It was no snake for it had feet," said Tinker.

"Well, how many feet did it have?" asked Tim.

"It had four feet, and could run very fast. It went behind those trees so fast I could scarcely see its head."

"Well, we'd better go over there and see what it was. If it wasn't a bird and it wasn't a snake, I don't know what it was," said Tim, and they started away toward the clump of trees where Tinker had seen the peculiar creature.

"It had so many stripes on it that it looked like it had been painted. But I can't see how anyone could be painted, out here in the Jungles."

"Did you say it looked like it was covered with stripes?" asked little Tim. He stopped to make sure of the reply.

"That is just what I said," replied Tinker.

Farm Bureau Official Information News for Farmers

DEVELOP LIVESTOCK WITH ASSOCIATIONS

Poland China and Chester
White Swine Breeders
Should Unite.

Livestock breed association have played a prominent part in the agricultural development of Rock county. A thinking farmer will deny that the Duroc-Jersey swine have been developed by the county association.

Association work is important, as it encourages better livestock and better production. Right now the Short-horn association has taken an active interest in the testing of herds for tuberculosis. They see the value and the necessity for better sales. The showing made among the Short-horn herds in the county is remarkable, for there have been no reactors among the herds tested.

Cattle associations encourage cow testing; it puts dairying money in business basis and creates a demand for the stock within the county.

Swine Associations

Rock county needs and should have a county association to represent the breeders of Poland-China and Chester White swine. There is enough of both breeds here to warrant a county organization similar, or even better if possible, than the present Duroc-Jersey association.

The stockman got to get more business. Livestock. The quality of the stock warrants more good business, and association work is probably the most effective medium of obtaining community sales. In the through the associations that the stock of stock are obtained. There is a community interest in breed development and an interchange of ideas. And the farmer who does not think and plan is generally still paying the most for his livestock. In the county association which must determine the policies, the advertising and sales methods.

Better Sales Work
The secretary or some agent sends out orders for sales. When one satisfactory sale is made in an outside district, right then and there a demand for Rock county stock is created. Such sales orders and the spreading of the reputation of the county. Association work goes a long way toward solving county-wide livestock problems.

The reorganized Rock county Holstein association is going to do a great good for the county and black-and-white breeders. No association must lose sight of the fact it is an accepted unit in development work. It is to spread the sale of sales among all its members, not a chosen few.

Likewise, every association member has obligations. The farmers of Rock county could take a burst of money as representing their association. They can take out and keep taking out and not putting back their own individual effort. In a short time the barrel would be empty. They have milked it dry. They are the factors to put in their share of time and work, particularly boosting the breed and their own association.

Worst Association

It is hoped that the farmers having Poland and Chester White swine will organize an effective association. The swine they are raising and selling is deserving of boosting and community development. Rock county has established as the leading Duroc center of Wisconsin and there is no reason why the development should not be extended to two other breeds of swine. The stock is here and it merits better sales.

Every member should work to obtain new members; should attend the meetings and become interested in the work.

Every member should take an active part in the program and do a little work when called upon.

The breed associations should take the broad interest in the boys and girls' club work and never neglect an opportunity to improve the association.

Campaign Is Started

to Control Barbary

Grain spread by the barbary bush, menaces the grain industry of the United States. Delay in speeding up the campaign against blackberry will cost the growers, millers and consumers of bread billions of dollars. At the present rate with the work is being prosecuted. It will take 10 to 12 years to clean up the barbary bushes in the 13 states in the middle west where the bush is effective in spreading spores which causes black stem rust in wheat and other grains. The present Federal appropriation is $147,000 and if it is increased to $500,000 annually for the next three or four years the barbary can be sufficiently controlled or even possibly eradicated in these states. This is the sentiment expressed by the members of the Farm Bureau appearing before the Senate Sub Committee on Agriculture.

While Wisconsin is not largely infested in which grows and the rusting of the grain crops are of vital interest to us both directly and indirectly, both from a producer's and consumer's standpoint. From survey work which has been done in the 13 states comprising our spring wheat section it has been found that Wisconsin has a larger number of barbary growing wild than any other state, which area a menace both to our own grain and that of adjoining states in spreading rust spores.

An educational meeting was held in the senate chamber of the state capital last Thursday to secure the preparatory to pushing the campaign in Wisconsin and endorsing the movement before congress for sufficient funds to complete this work within a few years.

A survey, covering 62,000 square miles, made by the department of agriculture, has located over 5,800,000 bushels. In Colorado it found 22,000; in Nebraska 124,000; in Iowa 27,000; in Michigan 171,000; in Minnesota 741,000; in Montana 8,000; in Nebraska 22,000; in North Dakota 17,000; in Ohio 85,000; in South Dakota 15,000; in Wisconsin 3,187,000.

A British Farm Blue

A London cablegram indicates that farmers in Great Britain are planning to take a page from the book of the American Farm Bureau.

and organize an agrarian bloc in their parliament.

Wisconsin Testing

Jump to the Lead

Wisconsin farmers lead and others follow in the eradication of tuberculosis among their herds.

Officials of the bureau of animal industry of the United States department of agriculture report that Wisconsin leads all other states in total number of herds and cattle accredited by the federal authorities. This state has just one short of 1,500 accredited herds containing 34,834 head. Minnesota comes nearest with 1,371 herds and 32,550 head. The other leaders are Pennsylvania with 228 herds, Ohio with 683, Maine with 673, and Indiana with 638.

The work in Wisconsin is carried on under the direction of Dr. J. S. Hays, who is co-operating with Dr. O. H. Ellason of the Wisconsin department of agriculture.

Chicago—Workers in Chicago electric plant agreed to accept wage cuts averaging 10 per cent effective May 1.
